What is The Turkish-Kurdish Event Database?

The Turkish-Kurdish Event Database is an agnostic archive of the human rights abuses committed in Anatolia by any group or agent.

The documentation will present to you the first version of a paper written by Dr. Demet Mousseau and Justin Napolitano, both of the University of Central Florida.

It was presented at the Hague in 2019 at The Peace Economics Conference.

A follow up is currently in production which will migrate the data to a Graph DB that strictly adheres to the person, object, location, event (POLE) schema. It will also implement an NLP algorithm to parse event data in real time.

1.1 The Kurdish Issue

The Kurdish issue has affected the Turkish state since the establishment of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in the late 1970's. Fighting for autonomy, the PKK has been the source of violence in southeastern Turkey, as terroristic events have taken the lives of countless Turkish civilians. The PKK has committed a range of human rights violations, including the utilization of child soldiers and the establishment of a comprehensive human trafficking network. The victims of these actions are not exclusively Turkish; in addition to these crimes leaking into the neighboring Syria and Iraq, PKK criminal activity has stretched into Europe, including Romania and Italy. In short, the PKK's actions have been broad and destructive.

1.2 The Turkish Issue

The Turkish state is not only a target, but also victim of the conflict. Despite being signatories to several human rights agreements – including the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights – Turkey has passed controversial government orders to restrict the basic rights of their Kurdish population. These include, but are not limited to, the manipulation of local elections, the implementation of state guards, and curfews in primarily Kurdish areas. As a consequence of the fighting between the two groups, human rights violations have been plentiful. Innocent civilians of all ethnicities are the true victims.

1.3 Intent of Research

The primary intent of our research is to provide evidence of the social impact of the ongoing Kurdish national movement. A special emphasis is placed upon events relating to women and to children. Secondarily, we strive to capture the human rights abuses committed by all parties involved.

1.4 The Data

1.4.1 Scope

The Turkish-Kurdish Database contains information on protests, riots, strikes, etc...in Turkey with regard to Kurdish national and political movements. There is no one Kurdish political party, nor is there one military arm. Thus, the objective of this dataset is to capture all events with respect to Kurdish action within the state of Turkey.

We do acknowledge that Kurdish factions within Turkey do no limit their range of action to the borders of the state. Thus, international events that can be directly tied to a Kurdish organization based within the state of Turkey will also be captured in this dataset.

1.4.2 Coding Procedure

Our coding procedures adopt the coding methodology of selected variables from the UCDP/Prio conflict dataset to maximize interoperability. Each variable selected from the dataset are labeled with a UCDP tag. As such, we have recoded a number of variables found in the UCDP/Prio Dataset to fit the methodology of our research.

We further enhance the dataset by adding a human rights component to record violations according to international treaties. These are reflected by the human_rights_1 and human_rights_2 variables. As we chose to focus on women and children dichotomous variables have been added to designate whether any given event effects women and another to designate the same for children. Also, variables have been added to account for deaths of women and of children.

EVENT QUERY PROCEDURE

Overview

This section explaines the search procedures used to query the Lexis-Nexis database. It can be used by research assistants to code events.

Date Oct 20, 2021

Chapter Contents

- Event Query Procedure
  - Primary Search Procedure
  - Query Result Sorting Procedure

2.1 Primary Search Procedure

- 1. Paste the following into the search bar on the Nexis Uni home page:
  - hlead(turkey) and women or rape or slavery or sexual or trafficking or child labor or child soldier or children or violence and publication(Agence France Presse English or associated press international)
- 2. Select the filter results drop down menu.
- 3. Select appropriate date ranges

2.2 Query Result Sorting Procedure

- 1. Begin with the oldest listed resulted. Then proceed chronologically. For each story, determine if the information is relevant to the data project. If not, discard the story.
- 2. During periods of civil conflict, defined by the start and end dates in the Uppsala Armed Conflict Database, code violent events associated with the civil conflicts.
- 3. Group duplicate articles together as a single event. In the case of disputed information, cite the most common estimates, and/or the most recently cited.

- 4. In the case that one article covers multiple events determine if the main actor(s), target(s), and issue(s) are different, and if so, code these as distinct events.
- 5. Code a new event if the actor(s), target(s), and issue(s) are different or if there is substantial time that elapses between on event and another. If the actors, targets, and issues are the same, but there is a brief lull in activity, code it as the same event, so long as there is significant "momentum" linking the time periods.
